At the inquest. Saturday afternoon, many witnesses identified the dead girl as Dolly Davis, a variety actrees and the adopted daughter of J. Charles Davis, of the managerial firm of Locke & Davis. Many people who knew Miss Davis were positive that it was her, and pointed out resemblances which accure to establish the identity.

A pretty, jaunty young woman came into The World office yesterday, however, and declared that she was Dolly Davis, very much alive, and indignant at the report that she had drowned herself.

The young woman said she had lived with Mr. Davis, her foster father, in Tarrytown, for several years, and was well known to many people there. She went there May 30 to visit a family named Fairchild, and remained until June 13. Then she returned to her home in this city.

She said she was born in Australia, and at the age of three years was adopted by Mrs. Davis (known on the stage as Miss Lottus), who afterwards died. Miss Davis had lived only a short time with Davis's second wife.

Saturday, The body will be embalined to-day and kept until the vexed question is settled.

Harlemites who live in the neighborhood of easant avenue and One Hundred and Sixeenth street are determined to battle for the ippression of the Standard Gas - House enches, which for two years have made life

Since their grievances were made public hey say that there has been a marked change for the better in the atmosphere of the neighborhood. "This shows," said one protesting citizen, "that the Company is able to operate its gas works without creating a public nulsance if it chooses, and it also indicates how effective the pressure of public opinion may be made when applied in the right way. "The Company claims that it employs a process of manufacture by which disagreeable smells can be almost entirely avoided. On everal occasions it has shown that it could do this, and that it has failed to carry out its promises is proof than it has been careless and negligent." Although Dr. Martin, the chemist of the Board of Health, has visited the gas works in uestion several times of late, he has reported hat the situation has been exaggerated, and, has intimated that the real grievance of the clilzens is that the existence of the gas works has deteriorated the value of property in the vicinity. This is denied very emphatically by the residents.
